TRANSLATION NOTES

The new character, much like the others so far, is literally called Angel-chan (Tenshi-chan), continuing the trend of the characters not having actual names.

Page 1:
In the first panel the succubus is referring to a greeting, typically done by a wife when her husband comes home, where you literally kneel with your hands on the floor and welcome your partner home.

Shunga is a type of ancient Japanese erotic art, usually done on woodblocks.

The concept of working "more than 24 hours a day" is a Japanese thing that basically entails you working even more than usual per shift.

After seeing him with a job magazine, the succubus actually uses an expression that means cheating and working is part of a man's duty and a man who can keep an extramarital affair while providing for his family is someone who's resourceful. Obviously this expression doesn't exist in English so I had to cut corners and use something more people know but in case you were curious this is what she actually said in the original.

In the last panel, in the original, the succubus says "kaninshite" (no more/forgive me/let me go please) and the guy replied with "kani?" (crab). I hope my conversion of the pun worked though!
